One of the Sorrows of Life—Many a volume has been written about the love of parents the love of mothers its enthusiasms of hope [illegible] fancy, its adorations of the unworthy its agony for the lost, but I do not remember that any one has ventured to touch [illegible] a still more terrible view of the [illegible] the disappointment, for [illegible] which such a woman as I have attempted to set before the reader—a woman full of high aspirations, noble generosities, and perhaps an unwarrantable personal pride all intensified by the homely circumstances of life around her—sometimes looks upon the absolutely commonplace people whom she has brought into the world She too has had her dreams about them while they were children and all things seemed possible—while they were youth, with still some grace and freshness of the morning veiling their unheroic outlines But a woman of seventy can cherish no fond delusions about her middle aged sons and daughters, who are, to all intents and purposes as old as she is What a dismal sense of failure must come into such a woman's heart while she looks at them! Perhaps this is a reason why grandfathers and grandmothers throw themselves so eagerly into the new generations by means of which human nature can always go on deceiving itself Heavens! What a difference between the ordinary man or woman of fifty, and that ideal creature which he or she appeared to the mother's eye at fifteen! The old people gaze and gaze to see our old features in us and who can express the blank of that disappointment, the cruel mortifications of those old hopes which never find expression in any words?—Mrs Oliphant

He was the leader of the Horse Guard at the battle of Waterloo

The Vancouver Register of last Saturday, says We see no reason why the present cold weather should have any bad effect upon the fruit crop of next season, neither can we learn that any injury has been done With winter wheat it is different Where it is protected by the snow no injury will result but where the snow had been partially blown off and the late rains have carried off the remainder wheat will suffer This will be the case especially with late sowed wheat The freezing at night draws the roots to the surface and then it is at the mercy of the cold We learn that a large portion of the wheat in the country is in this condition About half the ground is bare and if the present phase of the weather continues—freezing and thawing—it will have a serious effect upon the late sown wheat'

THE GRANGE.

[Hon A J Dufur in the Salem Record]

The organization of Grangers throughout the length and breadth of our land, and the rapid banding together of associations known as the Patrons of Husbandry, naturally leads the enquiring mind to seek the causes which thus bring them together, and speculate upon the results which must invariably arise from this almost universal movement of the agricultural masses of this country

In human affairs effects follow causes, and results are accomplished by action even though the actors are unseen The Grange is not a creature of accident of meaningless import called out to suit and please a passion whim or idle vagary, but owes its existence to a force of circumstances which have impelled the movement as an absolute necessity It is an acknowledged fact that agriculture lies at the foundation of the real prosperity of every State and nation, and represents three fourths of the brain and muscle of our entire land And while agriculture has been plodding on and on fostering civilization and furnishing material for trade and commerce banishing financial difficulties by patient toil and industry (which legislatures and statesmen have racked the brain in vain to solve) bearing without a murmur an insidious system of unjust taxation, made oppressive and unequal by unscrupulous politicians and corrupt legislators its votaries have at last discovered that the true criterion of worth and merit in the past has been a false one and that oily tongued sycophants who with artful cunning have repeatedly won their confidence have as repeatedly betrayed their interests and the products of their toil into the iron hands of capital and soulless monopolies

Evils daily multiplied and magnified crime and corruption confronting them on every hand has at last sprung with full force the first law of nature upon their unwilling senses, and awakened the apathy, and aroused the convictions of the Agricultural masses to the magnitude of the wrongs that oppress, and the dangers which threaten to engulf them

To correct these evils by concert of action and union of effort, to create a point of union and assure harmony in all matters affecting the agricultural [illegible] of the country, unite industry and service, lift up the producing classes from under the heel of speculation, place merchant, and producer consumer, planter, and factor side by side on the broad plane of a true American citizenship, and establish a Grand Center to the industrial interests that lie at the foundation of all prosperity, peace and happiness, are the purposes for which the Grange has been organized, and the great work it has to accomplish

Has the organization within itself the material capable of carrying out the plan of this great work and will its leaders be true to the trust so generously confided to their care? These questions are of the [illegible] vital importance, not only as regards the prosperity of our organization, but on their solution depends to a great extent the perpetuity of our present form of government as a [illegible] among the nations of the earth

PUT UP OR SHUT UP

THE BULLETIN'S [illegible] SHOWN UP AGAIN—A CHALLENGE THAT WILL NOT BE ACCEPTED

Albany, Jan 29 1875

To the Editor of the [illegible]

The editor of the Portland Bulletin pays me the unintentional compliment of a [illegible] editorial in his paper of to-day, under the heading of 'How the Oregonian agent gets subscribers' It is an important advertisement for me and will render me valuable service. When the portion of the public to whom I am known, and my friends generally, read the vulgar language and the insulting names applied to me in the editorial they will, most likely draw the conclusion that I am doing some good [illegible] for the public: that I am making some headway in favor of right, and concentrating public opinion against existing abuses, and in favor of [illegible] This is, in all probability, what stirs up the bile of the editor of the Bulletin. To be abused, insulted and maligned by such a person as the editor of the Bulletin is one of the highest compliments he could pay me. It shows the intellectual meanness to which he has fallen, the moral degradation to which he has sunk—and proves him to be a worthy successor to his predecessor in the editorial chair that both have disgraced

The first [illegible] of the editorial is introductory, from the beginning of the second paragraph to the close of the article it is a statement of falsehoods from the beginning to the end, unparalleled, as far as I know in the history of editorial writing in this State For meanness and falsifying it stands unrivaled.

A CHALLENGE.

I have arranged the editor's statements respecting me under ten different heads if he prefers it, he can separate his statements under as many more headings as he likes, and I challenge him to prove the truth of any one of them.

A [illegible].

As an evidence of my [illegible] of the falsehood of the whole [illegible] and in all its details, I propose to deposit $100 in the hands of [illegible] to be paid to the Treasurer of the Young Mens' Christian Association at the rate of $10 for every one of the [illegible] in the [illegible] own or any [illegible] to be submitted and [illegible] by two good [illegible] to be [illegible] by me. [illegible] the power to call in a third [illegible] is to be final The editor of the [illegible] to deposit a similar [illegible] in all [illegible] as my proposal if he fails to establish the truth of any or all his statements in [illegible] me.

For the purpose of giving the [illegible] of the Bulletin time to procure his witnesses and the necessary evidence to sustain his statements, as well as to economize time, I propose to give him two weeks if required, and would name to-morrow fortnight Saturday, the 13th February—at Portland, as the time and place for the investigation Should the editor of the Bulletin refuse this challenge, or some such reasonable proposal, to test the truth or falsehood of his statements respecting me, I will brand him as a [illegible] and a [illegible], a person to be shunned as the meanest of the mean and the [illegible] of the base

WASHINGTON CITY.

[illegible]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The House appropriation committee recommended an appropriation of half a million of dollars for the Pacific Mail Company under the provisions of the act of February 7, 1865. They do not recommend appropriating it in accordance with what is known as the subsidy act.

The California senators received a memorial from the San Francisco sugar refiners protesting against the proposed Hawaiian reciprocity treaty, on the ground that it would have the effect to transfer the business of refining to the Sandwich Islands.

The bill for the relief of former settlers on Point San Jose military reservation was briefly discussed in the Senate to-day and laid over without action.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Sprague, [illegible] the committee on public lands, reported adversely [illegible] the bill providing for the permanent location of the [illegible] of the Oregon Central railroad, and to extend the act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railway and telegraph line from [illegible] to [illegible] Oregon, approved May 4, 1870. It was indefinitely postponed.

The Arkansas Case. The President Acts Sensibly.

A Washington special to Tribune says the Arkansas case, it now seems probable, will not be changed by legislation this session. It is now well known the President, at a recent [illegible] with the members of the investigation committee, discovered that [illegible] committee. The majority, it is said, favor the disavowal of the [illegible] and the [illegible] ation of Brooks. The President is weary of State-making, and does not wish to have the Louisiana experience renewed in Arkansas. This difference is likely to defeat any proposed legislation.

[illegible] of Pinchback.

WASHINGTON, Jan 30.—The senate committee on elections is tied on the admission of Pinchback. Carpenter's return will give a majority against him.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—The World's New Orleans [illegible] dent says Kellogg wants Pinchback to fail to get his seat in the Senate on his new credentials, as he has resigned his credentials under the original election. This will leave the road open for [illegible] to the vacancy. [illegible] legislature [illegible] Pinchback [illegible] vengeance on Kellogg.

The Louisiana Investigation.

The prepond[illegible] private advices from New Orleans indicate that the congressional committee [illegible] ntially concur in the [illegible] by [illegible] and his associates of the sub-committee, that [illegible] of the returning [illegible] was a villainous fraud without which the Conservatives had won an undoubted triumph.

[illegible] Caucus.

The Republican senatorial caucus to-day, during a five hours' session, concluded to support the President on the Louisiana question in all he has done, and proposes to do. It is said eight Senators dissent from this position.

Alabama [illegible]

Four hundred and eighty pages of the Alabama investigation matter have been printed. It is very contradictory. Some witnesses allege intimidation was practiced; others deny it. Some protest the presence of federal troops alone prevented bloodshed; others say [illegible] quiet elections without troops.

Benjamin Gardiner testified to having rotten eggs thrown at him by whites while he was addressing a meeting. He believed that, but for violence and intimidation, the Republicans would have [illegible] the State by 25,000 or 30,000.

Pacific Mail Investigation.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The ways and means committee resumed the Pacific Mail investigation to-day. Jas. D. Smith, director in the company since 1871, explicitly contradicted Irwin's [illegible] ment by Stockwell, and Irwin's receipt for the expenditure of money. Witness never knew or heard that [illegible] Washington or elsewhere by Irwin, until months afterward. Witness testified that Stockwell informed him and other directors, when [illegible] resolution [illegible] authorizing the use of money in Washington, that the sum would in no case exceed [illegible] would be paid for doing [illegible] etc., that it was with this [illegible] the action of the executive committee was ratified by the directors. [illegible] sum were without the knowledge or [illegible] of the board of [illegible] books, of [illegible] June, 1872. Only [illegible]

Orway also swore that [illegible] has been, to his knowledge, a dollar paid in or through his office [illegible]

Before the ways and means committee, R. B. Irwin [illegible] the time of his recollection every word of his testimony concerning the interview with Smith was strictly true. Irwin was then [illegible] by Clark Bell, [illegible] for the Pacific Mail Co., [illegible] that such a privilege should be granted any outsider, Irwin, [illegible] Bell's examination, [illegible] that he had paid Capt. Bradbury $10,000. Witness employed Bradbury more on other business than on the subsidy. Witness knew only [illegible] inference that Stockwell employed Wm. S. [illegible] to whom was paid $125,000.

Washington, Jan. 30.—The Central Pacific and the Texas Pacific railway parties [illegible] to count on Senator Stewart's support, whose arrival is looked for hourly.

Another Attempt to Burn the Navy Department Building.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The third incendiary attempt was made to burn the navy department buildings at Washington. Ten or twelve log books were destroyed. It is supposed to be the work of persons interested in the destruction of the records.

[illegible] Mails.

Washington, Jan. 29.—[illegible] contractor for carrying the mails between Redding, California, and Roseburg, Oregon, having failed in the work, the Postmaster-General is in consultation with Representative Luttrell with a view to giving the contract to Taggart & Co., of North California.

Washington, Jan. 30.—It is supposed San Francisco refiners would not object to the Hawaiian reciprocity treaty and free admission of Hawaiian [illegible] if it were [illegible] to No. 12 Dutch [illegible] to Secretary Fish, with [illegible] that it might be well [illegible] United [illegible] and Hawaii; [illegible] makes its ports U. [illegible] tone.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—Archbishop Manning has issued a pamphlet of two pages in reply to Gladstone's expostulation, and maintains that the Vatican decrees have not estranged the condition of civil allegiance of Catholics; that it is undivided as that of other Christians; that recent decrees have not extended the [illegible] of the Pope; the Ecumenical Council and in no way touched the relations of church and state. The decrees merely declared doctrines which [illegible] The Pope [illegible] by virtue of either of these decrees, or of this supreme authority, make any claims on his adherents of a nature to impair the fullness of civil allegiance. The spiritual authority of the church condemns and declares not binding such temporal laws as deviate from the laws of God, and therefore impede the attainment of salvation. In regard to the supposition advanced that the Pope might attempt to depose the Queen of England, it is wholly withdrawn from the Catholic church. Every condition is wanting which would render such a deposition justifiable. The Archbishop declares the European powers have entered into a systematic conspiracy against the church and warns them that they are thereby wrecking themselves. In conclusion he says Gladstone's pamphlet invites Catholics to rebel against divine authority, encourages "schism," heresy and deadly sin.

AUSTRALIA.

The Transit of Venus.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 31.—The steamer Cyphrenes arrived yesterday from Sydney Dec. 23d, Auckland Dec. 30, and Honolulu Jan. 20.

In observing the transit of Venus the astronomers of New South Wales have been more favored than their scientific brethren in adjacent colonies. The 9th was perfectly cloudless at Sydney, and at Woodford, Goldburn and Mount Victoria, temporary stations, every phase of the event was fully observed, photographed and recorded. Cloudy weather prevented complete observations in Victoria, Tasmania and New Zealand.

Australian Items.

The demand for skilled labor is daily increasing, the rate of immigration being quite disproportionate to requirements.

On the [illegible] inst. the annexation of Fiji to British empire was celebrated in Sydney by a public banquet to his Excellency the Governor, as representative of the Crown in the negotiations with Cacoban, ex-King, who with two sons, Commodore Goodhough and others, were also guests.

The fate of Leichhardt appears destined to remain enveloped in mystery. Hume, who professed to have discovered in central Australia a survivor of the ill-fated expedition, perished of thirst in the northwest portion of the settled districts, while leading a small party to where he had professedly found traces of the lost explorers.

Railway extension is being pushed forward as rapidly as money and supply will permit. The first sod of a line to Orange was turned last week. That to Wagga is progressing favorably. Trial surveys of projected lines are also being made which will prove a very remunerative investment for the magnificent surplus of revenue held by the colonial treasurer.

From Hobarttown we are in possession of the following particulars: The bark Wolverine has arrived from Jitre Island, having on board Mr. Rhodes, second officer of the [illegible] [illegible] arrived from the American whaler Benjamin Cummings, Mr. Rhodes [illegible] sailed from Sydney May last, bound on a cruise, reached and fished at Howe's Island, situated near Solomon groupe for Beche Le Mer. The friendly demeanor of the natives disarming all suspicion, the crew of the brig separated, or rather were divided into three parties, the captain commanding one, Mr. Rhodes a second, and a [illegible] Davis the third. Mr. Rhodes, who had supplied the trading chief with tobacco, etc., was suddenly set upon and clubbed from behind, but the rest of his party, who were in a hut, came to his assistance, and attacking the natives succeeded in repulsing them and gained the boat, making for the brig, which had been left in charge of the chief officer. On reaching the vessel he found the natives in force about the brig; he at once made off, the natives in their canoes giving chase. He succeeded in reaching the Solomon groupe, where he was picked up by a whaler. Mr. Rhodes believes that the three parties were simultaneously attacked, the vessel seized, and he considers himself to be the sole white survivor. The six natives who formed his party remained faithful to him and escaped. Of these five are now on board the whaler. One died.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 30.—A train went through to Anaheim to-day. The railroads are now all in order. The extension of the Southern Pacific road from Sparta is about to be entered on at once, [illegible] for grading the road to San Gregoris pass being given out in sections.

The weather is clear and warm.

SAN DIEGO, Jan. 30.—The people of Monserrate, in this county, are somewhat disturbed over the mysterious disappearance of Mr. Rogerson, a Scotchman, about 50 years of age, who has been camping in that vicinity for about two years; was rather eccentric and was supposed to have several thousand dollars deposited in San Francisco, San Jose and Los Angeles savings banks, for which bank books were found at his last camp at Monserrate. Two horses and blankets and cooking utensils were found at the camp, but no fire had been made since the last rain. It is thought he has been foully dealt with.

SAN DIEGO, Jan. 24.—The Union has an editorial denouncing the action of the California State Grange in the interest of the Central Pacific Railroad Co., and its endeavor to defeat the Texas and Pacific project to get possession of the Western and Southern transcontinental route, and accusing the officers of the grange with having sold out.

SAN DIEGO, Jan. 30.—[illegible] rains here insure a bountiful harvest and abundant grass for sheep and stock. [illegible] Accident.

ANAHEIM, Jan 30.—A distressing accident occurred this morning at the ranch of John Bush, Santa Anna, in which a son of Mr. Bush, aged 12 years, was instantly killed. His uncle was practicing at a mark with a revolver, when it went off accidentally, the ball striking the child in the breast and killing him instantly.

VICE-PRESIDENT WILSON AND THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—A Herald dispatch from Washington says Vice-President Wilson has written a letter to Samuel Bowles, of the Springfield Republican, in reply to a paragraph in that journal asserting that the Vice-President openly gave up the Republican party, beaten, and certain of defeat at the next election. Wilson replies in effect that he has not said this, and don't believe it, he thinks the Republican party may keep in, and the necessity exists for its continuing in power. He says that it is in danger, but asserts that its peril comes not from its own fault, but from the misconduct of men who have held high positions in it. It must, he says, at once explicitly declare against a third term, and thus relieve the public mind of a painful apprehension, and put to rest at once and forever a fear which does more than aught else to alienate the people from the party. It ought to remove many office-holders, high and low, and especially some of the higher officers, whose management has become offensive to the people, and whose conduct both in their departments and in general affairs make them and the party odious. It must adopt a conciliatory and firm policy in Southern affairs, avoiding irritating Federal interference, and taking off the heavy hand of Government. Equal rights of the blacks must be defended, but unconstitutional acts and measures of doubtful constitutionality ought to be avoided. Public opinion of the North must not be offended by violent acts or language toward the South. Finally, Wilson thinks it necessary to open the door to those men who strayed off after Greeley, but whose hearts are still with the Republican party. They must be conciliated; their leading men must be taken into the confidence of the party, and some of them should be called to high places.

On Thursday morning last, George Beeler, of Monmouth, met with a severe accident. In climbing over a fence with an ax in one hand, he slipped and fell, cutting a severe gash across his left wrist.

ONE OF THE SORROWS OF LIFE.—Many a volume has been written about the love of parents, the [illegible] its enthusiasms of hope [illegible] lorations of the unworthy, [illegible] the lost; but I do not remember [illegible] any one has ventured to touch [illegible] more terrible view of [illegible] ppointment, for example, [illegible] such a woman as I have attempted to set before the reader—a woman full of high aspirations, noble generosity, [illegible] perhaps an unwarrantable [illegible] pride, all intensified by the homely circumstances of life around her—something like even the absolutely commonplace people whom she has brought into the world. She, too, has had her dreams about them while they were children, and all things seemed possible—while they were youth, with still some grace and freshness of the morning veiling their unheroic outlines. But a woman of seventy can cherish no fond delusions about her [illegible] aged sons and daughters, who are, to all intents and purposes, as old as she is. What a dismal sense of failure must come into such a woman's heart while she looks at them! Perhaps this is a reason why grandfathers and grandmothers throw themselves so eagerly into the new generations, by means of which human nature can always go on deceiving itself. Heavens! What a difference between the ordinary man or woman of fifty, and that ideal creature which he, or she appeared to the mother's eye at fifteen! The old people gaze and gaze to see our old features in us; and who can express the blank of that disappointment, the cruel mortifications of those old hopes, which never find expression in any words?—Mrs. Oliphant.

The following Welch anecdote of Christmas Evans has been translated into the French, Italian, and other European languages: On one occasion, while speaking at a Bible Society meeting, over which the Marquis of Anglesea presided, the [illegible] personally addressed the Marquis thus: "I imagine, my lord, that you have died, and that the angel of death has taken your soul to the portals of the holy city. Only a few are admitted into Paradise; the entrance is narrow and jealously watched, "Open!" shouts the angel of death as he presses forward to secure a place in heaven worthy of your lordship:

"'Who to?' asks the guardian of Paradise, with an authoritative voice.

"'To the Honorable the Marquis of Anglesea.'

"'Who is he?'

"'An officer in the army of the Duke of York.'

"'In that capacity,' says Peter, 'he is not on my list.'

"'But he has filled the office of High Master of the Ordnance.'

"'That may be possible, but we know him not.'

"'He has been several times Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.'

"'I say nothing to the contrary, but he is to us a total stranger.'

"'He was the leader of the Horse Guard at the battle of Waterloo.'

"'I repeat that we know nothing of him.'

"'Besides that, he was for many years President of the Bible Society.'

"'He!' shouted Peter, 'that alters the case. He can enter in; indeed, I see his name recorded among the blessed on the books of my Father.'"

HIGH SALARIES IN 1816.—In 1816, says the Albany Argus, when the salaries of the Federal officers were less than one-fourth of what they are now, an act was passed by Congress to increase them a little, and the late Gov. Throop, then member of Congress, voted for the increase. His vote created such displeasure with his constituents that he resigned. The following is his letter of resignation:

AUBURN, June 4, 1816.—Sir: The result of the late election for member of Congress in this district furnishes evidence that my services as a representative have not met with the approbation of my constituents. Having received the office by their free choice, founded no doubt upon the belief that I should discharge its duties according to their wishes, I cannot reconcile it to my feelings or sense of duty to withhold from them the power of choosing an agent who is better qualified to execute the important duties of that station. I therefore resign my seat as Representative in Congress. I have the honor to be, etc.,

E. T. THROOP.

The Mercury says: "The scarlet fever is afflicting many of our sister towns, and bereaving many happy homes, but has not touched Monmouth yet. It is not nearly so terrible in the East as it is here, and is generally considered a disease to be treated by good nurses, and experienced ladies, while in this country, it seems to baffle the best physicians, not [illegible] it is different here and there, but because of experience in its treatment. It is a strange disease in Oregon."

The new Methodist church at Baker City was dedicated Jan. 17th. There was quite a good attendance, and the amount pledged toward the church debt was about $650, which speaks very well for the liberality of the citizens of Baker City. The building is 28x38 feet, is lathed and plastered, and comfortably seated and cost perhaps $3,000. It is a neat, but unpretentious edifice and well adapted to the wants of this vicinity for some time to come.

The son of Mr. Hutmaker, postmaster at Goshen, Lane county, had his leg amputated just below the thigh joint on Wednesday of last week. The limb was broken about ten weeks ago, and since that time the leg has been allowed to gradually contract upon itself, the points of the two bones working entirely through the flesh; and becoming separated from each other about four inches. The meeting had the ring of business and zeal, and will, ere long, result in a plan of work that will give an impetus to Benton county.

The Vancouver Register of last Saturday, says: "We see no reason why the present cold weather should have any bad effect upon the fruit crop of next season, neither can we learn that any injury has been done. With winter wheat it is different. Where it is protected by the snow no injury will result, but where the snow had been partially blown off and the late rains have carried off the remainder, wheat will suffer. This will be the case especially with late sowed wheat. The freezing at night draws the roots to the surface and then it is at the mercy of the cold. We learn that a large portion of the wheat in the country is in this condition. About half the ground is bare and if the present phase of the weather continues—freezing and thawing—it will have a serious effect upon the late sown wheat."

THE GRANGE.

[Hon. A. J. Dufur in the [illegible]]

The organization of Granges throughout the length and breadth of our land, and the rapid banding together of [illegible] known as the Patrons of Husbandry, [illegible] the enquiring mind to [illegible] the causes which thus bring them together, and speculate upon the results which must invariably [illegible] from this almost universal movement of the agricultural masses of this country.

In human affairs, effects follow causes, and results are accomplished by action, even though the actors are unseen. The Grange is not a creature of accident [illegible] of [illegible] import, called out to suit and please a [illegible] whim, or idle vagary, but owes its existence to a force of circumstances which have impelled the movement as an absolute necessity. It is an acknowledged fact that agriculture lies at the foundation of the real prosperity of every State and nation, and represents three-fourths of the brain and muscle of our entire land. And while agriculture has been plodding on and on, fostering civilization and furnishing material for [illegible] and commerce, banishing financial difficulties by patient toil and industry (which legislatures and stat[illegible] have racked the brain in vain to solve); bearing without a murmur an insidious system of unjust taxation, made oppressive and unequal by unscrupulous politicians and corrupt legislators, its votaries have at last discovered, that the true criterion of worth and merit in the past has been a false one and that oily-tongued sycophants who with artful cunning have repeatedly won their confidence, have as repeatedly betrayed their interests and the products of their toil into the iron hands of capital and soulless monopolies.

Evils daily multiplied and [illegible] magnified; crime and corruption confronting them on every hand, has at last sprung with full force the first law of nature upon their unwilling sense; and awakened the apathy, and [illegible] the convictions of the Agricultural [illegible], to the magnitude of the wrongs that oppress, and the dangers which threaten to engulf them.

To correct these evils by concert of action this union of [illegible] and [illegible] are [illegible] the [illegible] of the country, give industry and [illegible] lift up the producing [illegible] from [illegible] the bed of [illegible] planter and factor [illegible] on the broad plane of a true American citizenship, and establish a [illegible]

MONDAY MORNING FEBRUARY 1 1875

THAT FLIRTATION

The News affects to think the OREGONIAN has been "flirting" with the Democrats, and has now "gone back on them" Our neighbor has certainly not been a very close reader of the OREGONIAN, or it would not have fallen into such an error The Democrat who ever thought we had any inclination toward the doctrines that formed the main planks in the platforms of Democratic principles, when that party had any distinctive platform of principles, is a Democrat who had never read the OREGONIAN, or who could not understand the plainest kind of English We helped to organize the Republican party and have never seen the least reason for supposing the principles on which it was founded were unsound Moreover we trace most of the abuses and corruptions to which partisan politics has led, back to the Democratic party That party was the author and first exemplar of the vicious system of making party fealty a test of fitness for official position and every student of the history of American politics knows that system has done more to corrupt our institutions than any other agency that has ever been in operation These things we have never been chary about saying and saying so clearly they could not fail to be understood It is the Democratic practices that crept into the Republican party in the latter days, and corrupted it, that we have combatted the use of political patronage to influence elections and corrupt the ballot box the enforcing of a system of party discipline that compels men to vote contrary to their conscientious convictions of right, on pain of personal ostracism or even pecuniary loss the practice of binding public servants by caucuses, to act in their representative capacity contrary to their own judgment. These party abuses that have well-nigh wrecked the Republican party, first prevailed in the Democratic organization And as to those individual instances of corruption, such as Credit Mobilier and other forms of bribe taking, neither party can claim any advantage over the other We are opposed to the Democratic principles the Democratic party, (if any of them have survived the struggles of the last four years) and the Democratic practices of both parties. So our Democratic neighbor need have no fears of our trying to crowd him out of the position of the organ of the Democracy

THE BULLETIN'S ADVERTISING

From the grand flourish of trumpets with which the ring organ, on last Friday, made the announcement of its purpose to publish on the following morning extracts from the leading Republican journals of the East, to prove that the OREGONIAN had misrepresented the position of these journals on the Louisiana troubles, we were led to expect a formidable array of the most influential authorities in the party Of course, we were aware that it would be impossible to quote on the other side the [illegible] papers [illegible] as we had quoted them [illegible]; but from the previous announcement by the Bulletin its readers had a right to expect something more than a list of [illegible] third rate ring organs, as an offset to our high and acknowledged authorities in the Republican party We confess to a feeling akin to disappointment ourselves, when on opening the ring paper of Saturday and looking over the list of Republican papers we found not one of the great journals of the party in the number, except the Chicago Tribune, which may be truthfully quoted on both sides. Three other very respectable Western Republican papers are named, and then follows in procession the "Glenwood Opinion," the Council Bluffs "Nonpareil," the Niles "Republican," and a few more obscure sheets, which not one in a hundred [illegible] before And this is the end of all the fine blustering the Bulletin has done about the sentiment of the party press in the East What say the Boston Advertiser and Journal, papers whose candor and consistency have [illegible] of journalism, and neither of which ever abate one jot or tittle of their Republicanism for any cause? Our readers already know what they say, and the Bulletin's readers would [illegible] they should be informed of the true position of their own party in the East What says the New York [illegible], the representative Republican journal of America? Our readers know what it says, but do the Bulletin's? And what says the New York Post, the paper edited by William Cullen Bryant, the venerable Republican of the old Freesoil school, and never yet known to utter an intemperate or hasty word upon any subject? We have given its expressions, while the ring organ has suppressed them. This morning, in another column, we give our readers the views of Harper's Weekly, next in influence in the Republican party to the N Y Times. The long article entitled "Events in Louisiana" is the leading editorial of the [illegible] last number, that of Jan 23 It will be seen that while the editor, George William Curtis, states clearly in that as well as the other article we publish, his apprehension of the consequences of a Democratic triumph in the Presidential election of 1876 and his views of the Democracy in general, he takes the strongest ground against the military interference in Louisiana It is presumed that great journal the Portland Bulletin, organ of a little clique of office holders late from the Democratic camp, will pronounce the candid course of Harper's Weekly shilly shallying as it pronounced the course of the other leading papers to which we have referred but the intelligent public will take a different view of the matter and will say that fairness is fairness and is entitled to respect in journalism as well as in private affairs Those papers can afford to smile at the ring organ's talk of shilly shallying, (if they ever know of it) for any one of them has more influence in the Republican party than the ring organ and all its specified authorities together, leaving out the Chicago Tribune

The truth is, the Portland ring organ is not in accord with the leading journals of its party on this Louisiana affair, and is feeling very badly over it While those journals do not hesitate to denounce the lawlessness that has prevailed in the South and has received encouragement, no doubt from the White League, they are not prompt to declare the action of Gen De Trobriand unlawful and dangerous. Nor does the President in his special message on the subject endorse the military interference There are some Republicans who think the action of De Trobriand justifiable and some Republican papers that try to defend it on legal grounds [illegible] they are conscientious, but they are sadly in the minority—both in point of numbers and influence Take out two or three from their number, and it could be truthfully affirmed that not a single Republican paper of as high a grade as second class was ranged on that side

TAKE CARE BILLY

Our friend Cave perpetrates this through the Washington county Independent

It will be recollected that when Trullinger Pittenger and W Lair Hill started from Nehalem they made up a purse and rented an old mule, in cahoots A discussion arose at once who should take the front seat and who the back seat All three of the political parties were represented in these gentlemen While Pittenger and Hill were contending for the position Trullinger (Dem) mounted the saddle Pittenger (Rep) claimed that the Independent party having no beginning or end should take the tail while Hill averred that virtue was always found in the middle The result was that the Democrat got away with the mule The result was that Hill gave the military road particular fits in the OREGONIAN and hints at a certain monopoly while Pittenger consoles himself howling secesh

We take no exception and we feel assured the other gentlemen named will take none, but friend Cave is liable to get into trouble nevertheless A prominent ring politician in this city, who has taken a special interest in mules since 1862, is on the war-path because he thinks Cave has done injustice to the mule

PACIFIC COAST COAL FIELDS

A gentleman who has given much attention to the subject of coal and coal mining informs us that from a careful study of the several mines already discovered and opened on the Pacific coast he is convinced there are vast coal fields still undiscovered all through west Oregon and northwestern California. He considers it quite certain that the mines of Nanaimo Bellingham Bay Seattle Tenino, Coos Bay and Monte Diablo all belong to one and the same coal measure, and that mines will yet be found at short intervals throughout the vast extent of country between the extreme points mentioned, and possibly much farther north and south Indeed, he is of opinion the coal measures of this coast will prove to be as extensive as those of the States west of Ohio.

Saturday's Bulletin made a great blow over a letter it had received from a lady at Hood river, in the Cascade mountains, who said the OREGONIAN had lost a large number of subscribers at that point. That sounds very well, but it becomes so insignificant as to be simply ridiculous when it is known that Hood river is a little isolated valley in the mountains where probably there are not taken half a dozen newspapers in the aggregate Here is one in return, for the Bulletin and its backers to meditate on Yesterday we received a letter from Tangent—no mere hole in the mountain—where we have a handsome list, saying "the Bulletin has not a single subscriber here Good by, ring organ

The ring organ here is unable to contain itself and cackles with irrepressible joy at the fact that two Independent Senators are to be replaced by Bourbons after the 4th of March The two Independents are Fenton, of New York who is to be succeeded by Francis Kernan, a Democratic politician and Schurz, of Missouri whose place is to be filled by an ex rebel Colonel Such is the exchange over which the ring organ is so rejoiced

We do not wonder that the ring paper is so immensely tickled over the election of Andy Johnson as Senator from Tennessee The editor of the Bulletin if we recollect aright, was a Johnson man in the old squabble of 1866 between Andy and the Republicans

The Cincinnati Commercial (Independent) thinks the action of the military in the organization of the Louisiana Legislature is defensible on legal ground

EVENTS IN LOUISIANA

[From Harper's Weekly of Jan 23]

It is the happy fortune of this country that we live under a government of laws and not of men, and that there is a universal and prompt awakening of the public mind when ever the authority of law is transcended The late events in New Orleans have produced a more general and painful excitement than any thing that has recently occurred, and the consequences will undoubtedly be far reaching and most important The Louisiana question is no longer one of party under the government, but of the fundamental guarantees of American liberty The condition of the State indeed, has long been deplorable, and it is one of the chief offenses of Congress that after the report of its own committee, revealing the anarchy that prevailed it refused to take action A large share of the responsibility for the late events therefore belongs to Congress But while this is true—while the situation may be all that has been represented by the most heated partisan—while all may be true that Gen Sheridan stated in his first dispatch although he could hardly have known it to be so—while all that is charged as to the murderous and unlawful designs of the White League may be correct—while all that was said in the Senate of assassination, Ku Klux and rebellion may be well founded—while all that is alleged of the irregularity and illegality of the organization of the Legislature may be conceded the action of the Republican government upon the assembling of the Louisiana legislature has no precedent whatever in American constitutional history, except the Democratic crime against Kansas and painfully recalls King Charles fatal and foolish arrest of the five members

We will take the facts from the chief actor, Mr Kellogg, in his statement to the reporter of the Herald and they are confirmed by the mass of testimony The general election took place in November and the result of the lower house of the legislature was very close The returning board which is the lawful body to declare the result gave a majority of two or three to the Republicans, and left some seats in doubt, to be settled by the legislature The legislature met and like all legislative bodies was the sole judge of the qualifications and election of its members

It is claimed that persons not legally returned as elected took part in the organization and that there was great disorder Upon this fifty two members—a clear majority of those legally returned as elected—waited upon the governor and told him that a mob was in possession of the legislative hall obstructing the action of the legislature Undoubtedly if there was dangerous disorder it was the duty of the governor in the last extremity to maintain the peace He immediately ordered a body of police to the spot, and fearing from the appearance of things a riot he requested the officer commanding the United States troops to send soldiers to his assistance to be marched into the building to aid the police orders being given and of course by his authority that no member returned as elected nor any regular officer of the legislature should be interfered with, but that the mob and persons not returned as elected should be removed from the floor of the house

This is the Governor's own statement Now he is not authorized to employ the United States troops to keep the peace until he has made a requisition upon the President and such is the jealous regard of the Constitution for the people as represented in the legislature that he can not do that except when the legislature can not be convened But it appears that the Governor [illegible] request to the President, while [illegible] his own statement there was a lawful [illegible] the legislature upon the spot If, as the Governor claims a clear majority of the lawful legislature waited upon him, the simple obvious, lawful course was that they should organize and then with the Governor if they thought the peril imminent call for necessary aid But there was and would have been no peril There would have been two bodies claiming to be the legislature—one composed according to the Governor's statement of a minority of those lawfully declared to be elected the other of a lawful majority and recognized by him If necessary an appeal could then have been made to Congress The gravity and the menace of this case we can better understand by making it our own Suppose that the election had left the New York legislature as closely divided between the parties as that of Louisiana, and half a dozen Republicans claiming to be elected, but thrown out by the canvassers had taken part in the organization and the House so constituted had chosen a Republican Speaker what should we have thought if Governor Tilden had sent a file of United States soldiers with orders that persons not returned as elected should be removed from the floor of the House Mr Thurman stated in the Senate that some years ago the legislature of Ohio was engaged for a fortnight in a desperate wrangle over organization but from whatever cause the trouble may have arisen he said that if President Van Buren had sent the army to settle the difficulty the army would not have left Columbus again Sam Adams would have said very much the same thing a hundred years ago

A very great wrong as it seems to us has been committed in New Orleans and with the acquiescence of the administration Republicans as we are we are so only because we believe the equal rights of all Americans are safer with the intelligence and conscience that make the inspiration and have in general directed the policy of the Republican party But we do not excuse or justify in this or any other case what seems to us a flagrant and fatal disregard of those guarantees which are indispensable to free popular government And because we are Republican, and contemplate with profound apprehension the possibility of the restoration of the Democratic party to power, we see with the utmost amazement incredulity and pain that measures are approved by the administration, which can have but one result and that is the total destruction of the party that was called into active and triumphant life by the aggressions of human slavery and the wrongs of Kansas

We trust that the Congress of the United States will no longer evade its duty, but its action whatever it may be cannot wholly undo the wrong that has been done nor altogether heal the wound which the great party of liberty, order and equal rights has received in the house of its friends The report of the Louisiana committee will perhaps be submitted before this paper is issued It will be awaited with intense interest and should it be, as we hope it will be unanimous it will unquestionably be accepted by the country as the best attainable statement of the situation in that unhappy State Meanwhile there is the remedy that never fails There is no need of rhetorical fury or brute force Either our whole American system is wrong or the intelligent vote of the country will peaceably settle this question

A WORD TO REPUBLICANS

[From Harper's Weekly Jan 23]

We trust that the President and the Republican members of Congress will not make the [illegible] that the Republican party can be [illegible] restored by any desperate domestic or foreign policy Undoubtedly the Democratic party will make the most of the unlawful conduct of Kellogg in Louisiana, and the approval of it by the President and cabinet, but there is no intelligent Republican who does not see that the occasion has been furnished to them by Republicans Meanwhile there is also no doubt that the White League is as hostile in spirit to the reconstructed Union as the old fire-eaters were, and that Gen Sheridan in describing anarchy does truthfully describe the condition of many parts of the Southern States

But this does not justify a clearly unconstitutional action It is the political distinction of the race to which we belong to know that liberty is secure only under the forms of law, and that when the form is destroyed or disregarded liberty itself is mortally wounded If the Republican majority in Congress would rescue the imperiled ascendency of the party they can do it in no way so surely as by distinctly declaring their condemnation of every act that has not a clear constitutional sanction and if the President in the message which is announced as we go to press does not show conclusively that the action in Louisiana was careful of every form of law the existence and future prospect of the Republican party depend upon the prompt repudiation of that action by a Republican Congress

It is because there is a general and deep conviction which we elsewhere express that a Democratic restoration would be a great national calamity—because there is a profound feeling that the political spirit of the dominant class in the Southern States is a dangerous and hateful spirit and that it longs and prays for the success of the Democratic party meaning to use that party now as it used it before the war—that intelligent and patriotic men see with dismay that the Administration is alienating its own friends, and giving aid and comfort to its enemies Let Congress remember its immense responsibility, and promptly remove from the party the stain of a just imputation of a disregard of the constitutional safeguards of liberty

THE BEECHER AND TILTON SCANDAL

NEW YORK Jan 27—In the Beecher trial to day the cross examination of Mr Moulton by Mr Tracy was continued. The main point of interest touched upon was the so-called letter of contrition, which witness declares was dictated to him word for word by Beecher He was very closely questioned in reference to everything connected with this letter He testified that Beecher said at the meeting at which this letter was written that he had prayed to God for help to discontinue their (his and Mrs Tilton's) sexual relations. They were the very words he used Beecher told witness of the story Bessie Turner told of Tilton's taking her from her bed to his and said he did not believe it He showed the letter of contrition to Tilton the night it was written did not know Tilton copied it did not know he got a copy of it nor how the portion that appeared in the Bacon letter was procured He admitted that Tilton might have had the letter in his possession an hour or two and testified that the letter was given him by Beecher in trust

Tracy asked if witness had any document relating to Bessie Turner and he asked other counsel to furnish any he had

Moulton said he had some, recognized two letters handed him by Tracy were from Bessie he did not remember when she went away to school Counsel offered the letters as evidence to show that she was sent away on account of the stories she heard against Tilton and not against Beecher

The court ruled them out and objected to the letters being read Counsel received permission to read a letter of January 12th to Mrs Tilton stating that the story of Tilton's carrying her to his bed was a wicked lie and the letter of January 10th stating that Mrs Morse had offered inducements for her to tell stories about Tilton The letters were admitted in evidence

After recess Moulton testified in regard to Beecher paying for the schooling of Bessie as he did when witness sent bills to him Witness then gave the names of subscribers to the stock of the Golden Age Tilton put in $4 000 to $5 000 Mason Woodruff and myself $5 000 each Robinson $1 000 These sums to be payable when the Age becomes a success and Tilton gave notes for the amount Tilton never told him the publication of the life of Victoria Woodhull was disastrous to him and his newspaper enterprise but he said he did it as a friendly act in the interest of the repression of stories against Beecher Mrs Woodhull visited witness some several times might have urged his wife to make her acquaintance never heard from Tilton that Mrs Woodhull was threatening to publish an article called Tit for Tat, reflecting on several ladies Adjourned

The Boise Statesman says J E Rice has relocated the Inca ledge near the old Gambrinus as the Woodbridge ledge, embracing 1 500 feet Rice has also located the Cherokee ledge, in Banner district, as the Pocahontas embracing 1 500 feet it originally embraced 2 500 feet

The News affects to think the OREGONIAN has been "flirting" with the Democrats and has now "gone back on them" Our neighbor has certainly not been a very close reader of the OREGONIAN or it would not have fallen into such an error The Democrat who ever thought we had any inclination toward the doctrines that formed the main planks in the platforms of Democratic principles, when that party had any distinctive platform of principles, is a Democrat who had never read the OREGONIAN, or who could not understand the plainest kind of English We helped to organize the Republican party and have never seen the least reason for supposing the principles on which it was founded were unsound Moreover, we trace most of the abuses and corruptions to which partisan politics has led back to the Democratic party That party was the author and first exemplar of the vicious system of making party fealty a test of fitness for official position, and every student of the history of American politics knows that system has done more to corrupt our institutions than any other agency that has ever been in operation. These things we have never been chary about saying, and [illegible] so clearly they could not fail to be understood It is the Democratic practices that crept into the Republican party in the latter days, and corrupted it, that we have [illegible] the use of political patronage to influence elections and corrupt the ballot box the enforcing of a system of party discipline that compels men to vote contrary to their conscientious convictions of right, on pain of personal ostracism or even pecuniary loss the practice of binding public servants by caucus, to act in their representative capacity contrary to their own judgment. These party abuses that have well nigh wrecked the Republican party, first prevailed in the Democratic organization. And as to those individual instances of corruption, such as Credit Mobilier, and other forms of bribe-taking, neither party can claim any advantage over the other We are opposed to the Democratic principles the Democratic party, (if any of them have survived the struggles of the last four years) and the Democratic practices of both parties. So our Democratic neighbor need have no fears of our trying to crowd him out of the position of the organ of the Democracy

THE BULLETIN'S AUTHORITIES

From the grand flourish of trumpets with which the ring organ, on last Friday, made the announcement of its purpose to publish on the following morning extracts from the leading Republican journals of the East to prove that the OREGONIAN had misrepresented the position of those journals on the Louisiana troubles, we were led to expect a formidable array of the most influential authorities in the party Of course, we were aware that it would be impossible to quote on the other side the same papers quoted by us, for we had quoted them correctly, but from the pretentious announcement by the Bulletin its readers had a right to expect something more than a list of small third class ring organs, as an offset to our high and acknowledged authorities in the Republican party We confess to a feeling akin to disappointment ourselves, when on opening the ring paper of Saturday and looking over the list of Republican papers we found not one of the great journals of the party in the number, except the Chicago Tribune, which may be truthfully quoted on both sides Three other very respectable Western Republican papers are named, and then follows in procession the Glenwood Opinion, the Council Bluffs "Nonpareil," the Niles "Republican," and a few more obscure sheets, which not one in a hundred of the Bulletin's readers ever heard of before And this is the end of all the fine blustering the Bulletin has done about the sentiment of the party press in the East What say the Boston Advertiser and Journal papers whose candor and consistency have placed them in the highest ranks of journalism, and neither of which ever abate one jot or tittle of their Republicanism for any cause? Our readers already know what they say, and the Bulletin's readers would know were that paper willing they should be informed of the true position of their contemporaries in the East. What says the New York Times, par excellence the representative Republican journal of America? Our readers know what it says but do the Bulletin's? And what says the New York Post, the paper edited by William Cullen Bryant, the venerable Republican of the old Free Soil school and never yet known to utter an intemperate or hasty word upon any subject? We have given its expressions, while the ring organ has suppressed them This morning, in another column, we give our readers the views of Harper's Weekly, next in influence in the Republican party to the N Y Times The long article entitled "Events in Louisiana" is the leading editorial of the very last number, that of Jan 23. It will be seen that while the editor, George William Curtis, states clearly in that as well as the other article we publish, his apprehension of the consequences of a Democratic triumph in the Presidential election of 1876 and his views of the Democracy in general, he takes the strongest ground against the military interference in Louisiana It is presumed that great journal the Portland Bulletin, organ of a little clique of officeholders late from the Democratic camp will pronounce the candid course of Harper's Weekly "shilly shallying," as it pronounced the course of the other leading papers to which we have referred, but the intelligent public will take a different view of the matter and will say that fairness is fairness and is entitled to respect in journalism as well as in private affairs Those papers can afford to smile at the ring organ's talk of shilly-shallying, (if they ever know of it) for any one of them has more influence in the Republican party than the ring organ and all its specified authorities together, leaving out the Chicago Tribune

The truth is the Portland ring organ is not in accord with the leading journals of its party on this Louisiana affair, and is feeling very badly over it. While those journals do not hesitate to denounce the lawlessness that has prevailed in the South and his [illegible] no doubt from the White Leaguers, they are not less prompt to declare the action of Gen. De Trobriand unlawful and dangerous. Nor does the President in his special message on the subject endorse the military interference There are some Republicans who think the action of De Trobriand justifiable, and some Republican papers that try to defend it on legal ground We concede they are conscientious, but they are sadly in the minority—both in point of numbers and influence Take out two or three from their number, and it could be truthfully affirmed that not a single Republican paper of as high a grade as second class was ranged on that side

TAKE CARE RILEY

Our friend Cave perpetrates this through the Washington county Independent

It will be recollected that when Trullinger Pittenger and W Lair Hill started from Nehalem they made up a purse and rented an old mule, in cahoots A discussion arose at once who should take the front seat and who the back seat All three of the political parties were represented in these gentlemen While Pittenger and Hill were contending for the position Trullinger (Dem) mounted the saddle. Pittenger (Rep) claimed that the Independent party having no beginning or end, should take the tail while Hill averred that virtue was always found in the middle. The result was that the Democrat got away with the mule The result was that Hill gave the military road particular fits in the OREGONIAN and hints at a certain monopoly while Pittenger [illegible] himself howling secesh

We take no exception, and we feel assured the other gentlemen named will take none but friend Cave is liable to get into trouble nevertheless A prominent ring politician in this city, who has taken a special interest in mules since 1862, is on the war path because he thinks Cave has done injustice to the mule

A gentleman who has given much attention to the subject of coal and coal mining informs us that from a careful study of the several mines already discovered and opened on the Pacific coast he is convinced there are vast coal fields still undiscovered all through west Oregon and northwestern California. He considers it quite certain that the mines of Nanaimo, Bellingham Bay Seattle Tenino Coos Bay and Monte Diablo all belong to one and the same coal measure, and that mines will yet be found at short intervals throughout the vast extent of country between the extreme points mentioned, and possibly much farther north and south Indeed he is of opinion the coal measures of this coast will prove to be as extensive as those of the States west of Ohio.

Saturday's Bulletin made a great blow over a letter it had received from somebody at Hood river, in the Cascade mountains, who said the OREGONIAN had lost a large number of subscribers at that point. That sounds very well, but it becomes so insignificant as to be simply ridiculous when it is known that Hood river is a little isolated valley in the mountains where probably there are not taken half a dozen newspapers in the aggregate Here is one in return, for the Bulletin and its backers to meditate on Yesterday we received a letter from Tygh [illegible]—no mere hole in the mountain—where we have a handsome list, saying "the Bulletin has not a single subscriber here" Good by, ring organ

The ring organ here is unable to contain itself and cackles with irrepressible joy at the fact that two Independent Senators are to be replaced by Bourbons after the 4th of March The two Independents are Fenton, of New York, who is to be succeeded by Francis Kernan, a Democratic politician and Schurz of Missouri whose place is to be filled by an ex rebel Colonel Such is the exchange over which the ring organ is so rejoiced

We do not wonder that the ring paper is so immensely tickled over the election of Andy Johnson as Senator from Tennessee The editor of the Bulletin, if we recollect aright, was a Johnson man in the old squabble of 1866 between Andy and the Republicans.

The Cincinnati Commercial (Independent) thinks the action of the military in the organization of the Louisiana Legislature is defensible on legal ground

EVENTS IN LOUISIANA

[From Harper's Weekly of Jan 23]

It is the happy fortune of this country that we live under a government of laws and not of men, and that there is a universal and prompt awakening of the public mind whenever the authority of law is transcended. The late events in New Orleans have produced a more general and painful excitement than any thing that has recently occurred, and the consequences will undoubtedly be far reaching and most important. The Louisiana question is no longer one of party under the government, but of the fundamental guarantees of American liberty The condition of the State indeed, has long been deplorable, and it is one of the chief offenses of Congress that after the report of its own committee, revealing the anarchy that prevailed, it refused to take action A large share of the responsibility for the late events, therefore, belongs to Congress But while this is true—while the situation may be all that has been represented by the most heated partisan—while all may be true that Gen Sheridan stated in his first dispatch, although he could hardly have known it to be so—while all that is charged as to the murderous and unlawful designs of the White League may be correct—while all that was said in the Senate of assassination Ku Klux and rebellion may be well founded—while all that is alleged of the irregularity and illegality of the organization of the Legislature may be conceded, the action of the Republican government upon the [illegible] of the Louisiana legislature has no precedent whatever in American constitutional history except the Democratic crime against Kansas and painfully recalls King Charles fatal and foolish arrest of the five members

We will take the facts from the chief actor Mr Kellogg in his statement to the reporter of the Herald and they are confirmed by the mass of testimony The general election took place in November, and the result of the lower house of the legislature was very close The returning board which is the lawful body to declare the result gave a majority of two or three to the Republicans, and left some seats in doubt to be settled by the legislature The legislature met and like all legislative bodies was the sole judge of the qualifications and election of its members

It is claimed that persons not legally returned as elected took part in the organization, and that there was great disorder Upon this fifty two members—a clear majority of those legally returned as elected—waited upon the governor and told him that a mob was in possession of the legislative hall obstructing the action of the legislature Undoubtedly if there was dangerous disorder it was the duty of the governor in the last extremity to maintain the peace He immediately ordered a body of police to the spot and fearing from the appearance of things a riot he requested the officer commanding the United States troops to send soldiers to his assistance to be marched into the building to aid the police orders being given and of course by his authority that no member returned as elected, nor any regular officer of the legislature, should be interfered with but that the mob, and persons not returned as elected, should be removed from the floor of the house

This is the Governor's own statement Now he is not authorized to employ the United States troops to keep the peace until he has made a requisition upon the President and such is the jealous regard of the Constitution for the people as represented in the legislature that he can not do so except when the legislature can not be convened. But it appears that the Governor made no request to the President, [illegible] by his own statement there was a lawful quorum of the legislature upon the spot If as the Governor claims a clear majority of the lawful legislature waited upon him the simple obvious, lawful course was that they should organize and then with the Governor if they thought the peril imminent call for necessity aid But there was and would have been no peril There would have been two bodies claiming to be the legislature—one composed according to the Governor's statement of a minority of those lawfully declared to be elected the other of a lawful majority and recognized by him If necessary an appeal could then have been made to Congress The gravity and the menace of this case we can better understand by making it our own Suppose that the election had left the New York legislature as closely divided between the parties as that of Louisiana and half a dozen Republicans claiming to be elected but thrown out by the canvassers had taken part in the organization and the House so constituted had chosen a Republican Speaker, what should we have thought if Governor Tilden had sent a file of United States soldiers with orders that persons not returned as elected should be removed from the floor of the House" Mr Thurman stated in the Senate that some years ago the legislature of Ohio was engaged for a fortnight in a desperate wrangle over organization but from whatever cause the trouble may have arisen he said that if President Van Buren had sent the army to settle the difficulty the army would not have left Columbus again Sam Adams would have said very much the same thing a hundred years ago

A very great wrong as it seems to us has been committed in New Orleans, and with the acquiescence of the administration Republicans as we are, we are so only because we believe the equal rights of all Americans are safer with the intelligence and conscience that make the inspiration and have in general directed the policy of the Republican party But we do not excuse or justify, in this or any other case what seems to us a flagrant and fatal disregard of those guarantees which are indispensable to free popular government And because we are Republican, and contemplate with profound apprehension the possibility of the restoration of the Democratic party to power we see with the utmost amazement, incredulity and pain, that measures are approved by the administration which can have but one result and that is the total destruction of the party that was called into active and triumphant life by the aggressions of human slavery and the wrongs of Kansas.

We trust that the Congress of the United States will no longer evade its duty, but its action, whatever it may be cannot wholly undo the wrong that has been done nor altogether heal the wound which the great party of liberty, order, and equal rights has received in the house of its friends The report of the Louisiana committee will perhaps be submitted before this paper is issued It will be awaited with intense interest and should it be as we hope it will be unanimous, it will unquestionably be accepted by the country as the best attainable statement of the situation in that unhappy State Meanwhile there is the remedy that never fails There is no need of rhetorical fury or brute force Either our whole American system is wrong or the intelligent vote of the country will peaceably settle this question

[From Harper's Weekly Jan 23]

We trust that the President and the Republican members of Congress will not make the fatal mistake of supposing that the Republican party can be united or its prestige restored by any desperate domestic or foreign policy Undoubtedly the Democratic party will make the most of the unlawful conduct of Kellogg in Louisiana, and the approval of it by the President and cabinet, but there is no intelligent Republican who does not see that the occasion has been furnished to them by Republicans. Meanwhile there is also no doubt that the White League is as hostile in spirit to the reconstructed Union as the old fire-eaters were and that Gen Sheridan in describing anarchy does truthfully describe the condition of many parts of the Southern States.

But this does not justify a clearly unconstitutional action. It is the political distinction of the race to which we belong to know that liberty is secure only under the forms of law, and that when the form is destroyed or disregarded liberty itself is mortally wounded If the Republican majority in Congress would rescue the imperiled ascendency of the party they can do it in no way so surely as by distinctly declaring their condemnation of every act that has not a clear constitutional sanction and if the President, in the message which is announced as we go to press does not show conclusively that the action in Louisiana was careful of every form of law the existence and future prospect of the Republican party depend upon the prompt repudiation of that action by a Republican Congress

It is because there is a general and deep conviction which we elsewhere express, that a Democratic restoration would be a great national calamity—because there is a profound feeling that the political spirit of the dominant class in the Southern States is a dangerous and hateful spirit and that it longs and prays for the success of the Democratic party meaning to use that party now as it used it before the war—that intelligent and patriotic men see with dismay that the Administration is alienating its own friends, and giving aid and comfort to its enemies Let Congress remember its immense responsibility, and promptly remove from the party the stain of a just imputation of a disregard of the constitutional safeguards of liberty

NEW YORK Jan 21 —In the Beecher trial to day the cross-examination of Mr Moulton by Mr Tracy was continued The main point of interest touched upon was the so called letter of contrition which witness declares was dictated to him word for word by Beecher He was very closely questioned in reference to everything connected with this letter. He testified that Beecher said at the meeting at which this letter was written that he had prayed to God for help to discontinue their (his and Mrs Tilton's) sexual relations They were the very words he used Beecher told witness of the story Bessie Turner told of Tilton's taking her from her bed to his, and said he did not believe it He showed the letter of contrition to Tilton the night it was written, did not know Tilton copied it, did not know he got a copy of it nor how the portion that appeared in the Bacon letter was procured He admitted that Tilton might have had the letter in his possession an hour or two and testified that the letter was given him by Beecher in trust

Tracy asked if witness had any document relating to Bessie Turner and he asked other counsel to furnish any he had.

Moulton said he had some recognized two letters handed him by Tracy were from Bessie he did not remember when she went away to school Counsel offered the letters as evidence to show that she was sent away on account of the stories she heard against Tilton and not against Beecher

The court ruled them out and objected to the letters being read Counsel received permission to read a letter of January 12th to Mrs Tilton stating that the story of Tilton's carrying her to his bed was a wicked lie, and the letter of January 10th stating that Mrs Morse had offered inducements for her to tell stories about Tilton The letters were admitted in evidence

After recess Moulton testified in regard to Beecher paying for the schooling of Bessie as he did when witness sent bills to him Witness then gave the names of subscribers to the stock of the Golden Age Tilton put in $1 000 to $5 000 Mason Woodruff and myself $5 000 each Robinson $1 000 These sums to be payable when the Age becomes a success and Tilton gave notes for the amount Tilton never told him the publication of the life of Victoria Woodhull was disastrous to him and his newspaper enterprise but he said he did it as a friendly act in the interest of the repression of stories against Beecher Mrs Woodhull visited witness' house several times might have urged his wife to make her acquaintance never heard from Tilton that Mrs Woodhull was threatening to publish an article called Tit for Tat, reflecting on several ladies Adjourned

The Boise Statesman says L E Rice has relocated the Fuca ledge near the old Gambrinus as the Woodbridge ledge, embracing 1 500 feet. Rice has also re located the Cherokee ledge in Banner district as the Pocahontas embracing 1,500 feet it originally embraced 2,500 feet

MONDAY [illegible] FEBRUARY 1, 1875.

THE CITY.

[illegible] Mr. Geo. W. Weidler, after 15 [illegible] down the river, returned home last evening. During most of the time he has been at Astoria endeavoring to effect arrangements for bringing up the freight and express matter left there. Mr. Weidler left Portland on the 17th ult. He started overland for Vancouver, [illegible] the Columbia at that point on the ice. He then traveled down the ship channel on the ice, to Eagle Cliff, W. T., arriving there Monday, January 18th. A snowstorm [illegible] further traveling until the [illegible] Mr. Weidler left Eagle Cliff, reaching [illegible] that night. The snow was from [illegible] in depth on the Territory side of the river, and appeared to be much more than that on the Oregon side viewing the hills surrounding Westport. On the 23d the party [illegible] interrupted by several mishaps, chief among which was a shipwreck, as they traveled by boat when they could (or by walking on the ice when they could not) navigate, [illegible] the boat after them. In a leaking [illegible] they sailed, during the night, to main land just above Cementville, but not having any definite bearings could not tell where they were, and after making repairs started out again for Astoria, pulling some four hours, when daylight revealed to his delighted vision Astoria. He arrived at that place on Sunday—just seven days from Portland. Mr. Weidler returned in a like manner, coming on the ice most of the way to Kalama, from there to Vancouver, and overland to this place. He had a long, rough and fatiguing trip of it, and, as may well be supposed, is [illegible] in finding himself again at home.

[illegible] Astoria.—Mr. T. P. Spitz and Mr. F. A. Frank, both of San Francisco, who [illegible] as far as Astoria as passengers on the Ajax on her last voyage, arrived in this city [illegible] having come over the military trail. They brought horses along, but the depth of mud, which averages about three feet, and [illegible] character of the [illegible] for them to keep their saddles [illegible] of the time. They agree that the [illegible] is about as difficult and fatiguing as any journey of the same length could possibly be. The party left Astoria last Thursday, at noon, in company with the mail [illegible] trip to the Gale's creek [illegible] night. On Sunday morning, [illegible] their saddle horses, they were [illegible] to Forest Grove, where [illegible] for the stage to this [illegible] the prospect of navi[illegible] the lower Columbia not [illegible]. The steam launch Ka[illegible] went up the river about [illegible] Geo. Weidler, Esq., but was [illegible] Mr. Weidler made his way [illegible] on the ice, some of it floating. Oro Fino Theater.—"Rosedale, or the Rifle Ball," at its second and third renditions, on [illegible] afternoon and evening, at Oro Fino Theater, drew very good houses, and was presented in a manner far more creditable and satisfactory than on the occasion of its first production. It is unnecessary to give any description of the plot of this beautiful drama, as the public are thoroughly familiar with the incidents and situations of the play. A brief mention of the several characters of the drama, and the manner in which each was presented, will suffice. "Elliot Gray," the leading, central character, of the play, found a fit representative in Charles A. Ball, Esq. This gentleman's acting throughout was characterized by moderation, naturalness and ease. His personation was in every sense easy and effective, to a degree not to be expected in an amateur. At times the elocution was a little monotonous and faulty, and the gesticulations not as finished and graceful as could have been desired; but in the main Mr. Ball can be congratulated on having acquitted himself in a manner flattering to his pride, and to the agreeable surprise of the public. In the tableaux scene at the close of the fourth act, when "Elliot Gray" shouts "Up, Lancers!" the acting of Mr. Ball was not inferior to that of a professional who was thoroughly up in the art dramatic. Mr. Charles M. Brown, as "Mathew Leigh," although a little out of his line—villainous characters being his strong suit, in our opinion—played the role quite smoothly and with pleasing effect. O. P. Mason's "Bunberry Kobb" was far better than the public had a right to expect. It was cleverly sustained, and the character invested with much that was ludicrous and laugh-provoking. Col. May, personated by Mr. George C. Sears, was scarcely up to the average standard. The gentleman made quite a "hit" in the "Color Guard" as "Louis Ludlow" the patriot lover; but the character of "Colonel May," the cool, crafty, scheming villain in broadcloth, seemed wholly unsuited to him, and his personation was rather stilted and forced. We attribute this seeming failure, more to Mr. Sears' detestation of, and want of sympathy with the character, than to any deficiency of dramatic ability to properly and satisfactorily represent the part. Comment is unnecessary as to the manner in which Mr. Fulford represented the detestable role of "Miles McKenna." Suffice it to say, he made himself perfectly despicable in the eyes of the audience, which is another mode of saying he did capitally. Little Lucy Mason, as the boy, "Arthur May," was one of the most pleasing features of the drama, and for one so young and inexperienced, sustained the allotted part as creditably as any. Miss Mary L. Pollock, as "Lady Florence," was all that the character required—graceful, dignified and lady-like. This lady, we understand, cherishes histrionic aspirations, and if favored by circumstances, proposes to adopt the stage as a profession. For a novice, Miss Pollock shows that she is not deficient in the essential elements of an actress—true conception of a character, a good stage presence, with the auxiliaries of pl[illegible] at form, [illegible], and a round, clear, well-modulated voice. Time, experience and patient study is all that the young lady requires. "Rosa Leigh" found a true and fitting representative in Mrs. Fulford, who personated the sweet, lovable and sisterly-like character in a most effective style. R. C. White, as "Tabitha Stork" ("nothing of the sort"), that most termagant and disagreeable of housekeepers, who, after all, had a kind of sympathetic [illegible], did some very clever acting, and won rounds of applause. Of the remainder and subordinate characters in the cast we can speak in terms of moderate praise. "Lady Adele," by Mrs. Katie Zimmer; "Sarah," by Mrs. Halpruner; "Farmer Green," H. Webber; "Romany," H. Eastle, and others. The presence of a number of the City Rifles in full dress in the tableaux at the close of the fourth act and at the ball-room scene, contributed greatly to the general effect and appearance of the drama. The most painfully apparent and unpardonable defect of the whole play was want of knowledge of the "lines" by several, rendering it nece[illegible]ry for them to be prompted with unpleasant frequency. With that exception the play was a success.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

County court will convene to-day.

Damp and disagreeable yesterday.

The Albany express is running again.

The long looked for bark Midas left San Francisco for this port late last week.

The Astoria mail arrived last evening, and will leave by boat at 6 o'clock this morning.

Collectors are flitting about as usual to-day. Prepare to pay, or trouble them to call again.

Business is improving since the river opened, and everything will be lovely when the Columbia is free again.

Mr. Emil Zeitfuchs, who returned from Germany some weeks ago, is still confined to his residence by sickness.

Mrs. Elizabeth E. Lunbaugh, of [illegible], Cal., wants to hear from Jos. F. [illegible], her brother, who was last heard from in Oregon about three years ago.

Pay your gas bills before the 4th inst., and save $1 per thousand. This is an item worth considering these dull times.

Mr. Reed has sold one of his yearling Clydesdale stallions to Mr. A. King, of this city, for $700. He takes him to Goose Lake.

An exchange says: "Ben Holladay has applied for permission to construct wharves and stables on the reservation at Fort Stevens."

East Portlanders wanting the Daily Oregonian can have it delivered promptly by Vallie Brown, our carrier, an energetic little fellow, by leaving orders at the postoffice on that side of the river.

Many teamsters failed to have their horses rough shod, and during the past few days the poor animals thus neglected have frequently slipped down, meeting with accidents in some instances. This oversight should not occur again.

The old man who attempted a few days ago to commit suicide by drowning, made a second attempt by jumping from the railroad ferry pontoon on Saturday. He was fished out, and now languishes in the county jail. He is a pitiable object.

Parties who arrived in this city yesterday from Astoria report that they met Mr. Scott, a special messenger dispatched by Messrs. Corbitt & Macleay, to the Middlesex with papers, etc. Mr. Scott was in good spirits, and doubtless ere this is down by the "Sounding Sea."

The board of pilot commissioners at the meeting on Tuesday at Astoria, decided to issue no new branches until a full meeting of the board can be had, for the reason that the courts have decided a full board shall be present for such business. Mr. Wadhams was nece[illegible]rily detained here, the river being closed.

The Astorian makes itself ridiculous about matters connected with the closing of the river by ice, and assumes that Portland will soon "go to rack," because water communication with Astoria is cut off for a few days in the course of ten years. The editor of that paper forgets that many cities containing more people than all Oregon are ice-bound every winter.

DROWNED.

LOUIS GRIFFETH, A YOUNG SAILOR, LOSES HIS LIFE BY THE SINKING OF A SKIFF, ON SATURDAY NIGHT—SOME ONE TO BLAME.

Again we are called upon to chronicle the death, by drowning, of a young man named Louis Griffeth, in the Wallemet river, last Saturday night. Substantially, the circumstances of the drowning are as follows:

On Saturday afternoon two men named respectively Flemming and Enner, who reside on a farm down the river in the vicinity of Swan Island, came to the city. These men, it seems, slaughtered a beef on Saturday and brought a portion of the meat to the city for the purpose of selling it; but the animal had been so badly slaughtered that none of the butchers would purchase the meat. However, the men succeeded at length in disposing of the meat to one of the Chinese butchers. Having one quarter of the slaughtered animal to dispose of, the men began to seek for a purchaser. Mr. Kafka, who keeps a junk store at the corner of Front and Oak streets, at length bargained for the meat. He had in his employ a young man named Louis Griffeth, and it was understood that Kafka was to send him down with the men to get the beef. Flemming, Enner and Griffeth were to go down to the farm in a skiff and the latter was to bring the meat back in the same boat. Matters were thus settled and the three persons embarked in a small skiff at the foot of D street, and started down the river. It was about 9 o'clock in the evening when the men left the city. Before starting, Flemming and Enner had been indulging freely in liquor and were much intoxicated. Just previous to their departure, they were observed to enter a saloon and purchase a bottle of whisky. When they entered the skiff, Griffeth and one of the men took a seat near the stern of the boat, while the other person sat in the middle and used the oars. After emerging from the slip the oarsman headed down the river. How the boat came to fill with water, of course can not be known, as the two intoxicated men have separate stories about the matter; but so it happened that by the time the skiff came opposite the schooner Hera it had filled with water. One man says that the boat leaked, and the other declares that the water came in over the stern. Hearing cries for help, the first and second mates of the Hera ran on deck and looking over, discovered through the darkness, several persons struggling in the water. At the time the skiff was capsized, Flemming and Enner, finding themselves in the water, started to swim for the shore, leaving Griffeth to shift for himself. As quickly as possible, a boat was lowered from the Hera and the two mates leaped in and started to the assistance of the imperiled youth. While the boat was being lowered Griffeth continued to cry for help, and was encouraged to hold on by the men, who told him that they would come to him in a few minutes. Suddenly he ceased to speak, a gurgling sound was heard, and the poor fellow sank beneath the dark waters. When the mates reached the place they found the skiff floating keel up, but no trace of poor Griffeth. Meantime, Enner and Flemming had swum to the rear end of the steamer Shoo Fly, and clambering up on the wheel, reached the deck in safety. Even the cold bath and narrow escape was not sufficient to sober these men up. Dry clothes were provided them, and after warming themselves these valiant (?) fellows manifested their disinterestedness and apathy by righting the capsized skiff, and proceeding on their way as if nothing unusual had transpired. As before stated, the men have contradictory versions of how the accident occurred.

Louis Griffeth was aged about twenty years. He was a native of North Wales, where his mother is still residing. [illegible] fall Griffeth came to Portland as a sailor on the bark Hotspur. He is said to have been a steady, industrious young fellow, and well liked. No efforts have been made as yet to recover the body. We are of the opinion that the case ought to be thoroughly investigated, and if it is found that through culpable or criminal negligence the young man lost his life, his companions should be held measurably responsible, and punished accordingly.

The winter is fairly upon us. We must keep warm no matter what the cost. Don't go about like a frozen man, but straighten up and boldly enter the establishment of BECK & WALDMAN, and ask them to show you those heavy winter goods. They'll do it, and what's more, will not astonish you with big prices because of the cold weather. On the contrary, they propose to make their patrons happy by clothing them well, and at the same time charging a low price to suit the present times. Don't wait until it is too late, but go now.

Cause of Nervousness.

The maladies which above all others cause nervousness, are dyspepsia, billiousness and constipation. The great sympathetic nerve which connects the epigastric region with the brain, is always injuriously affected if the stomach and bowels are disordered: a permanent derangement of the functions of those organs reacts by sympathy upon the entire nervous system. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters in restoring tone and regularity to the digestive apparatus, and overcoming constipation, permanently remedy the nervous complaints which originate in alimentary weakness or disturbances. They are the very best nervine that can be used. By eradicating the exciting causes of nervous weakness, they permanently overcome the disability itself. But this is not all. By checking the maladies which cause nervousness, they build up anew the system weakened and depleted by nervous disease.

For Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, and all affections of the Lungs, take AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.

Healthful Stimulation.

Diffusable stimulants, provided they be absolutely pure, are among the most useful medicinal agents employed by physicians. When the tone of the system is lowered by the depressing influences of disease, or there is an inherent want of vigor in the constitution, they serve to counteract weakening tendencies, and cheer the mind of the desponding invalid. But when, as in the case of Hostetter's Bitters, they possess tonic and alterative properties, their effects are rendered permanent, and they accomplish a trebly beneficial result. The Bitters not only relieve nervous debility and mental depression by their healthfully stimulative action, but infuse abiding vigor into the depleted system, and rectify those internal disturbances which are the real causes of weakness. The purity and the wholesomeness of the alcoholic basis of the Bitters greatly increases the efficacy of their botanic ingredients, a fact which the completeness of their curative effects sufficiently demonstrates.

There will be a meeting of the Board of Trustees this evening.

A few days since Dr. C. H. Raffety removed a large tumor from the muscles of a Mr. Otis' left arm. The operation was a rather painful one, and it was deemed necessary to place the patient under the influence of chloroform. The tumor was nearly as large as one's fist, and for a long time had been a source of painful annoyance to Mr. Otis. The operation was performed in a skillful manner, and the patient is doing well.

A gentleman named McEwen, who resides in Stephens' Addition, met with a painful accident on Saturday afternoon. He started to walk toward his home on the trestle-work south of L street. After walking a short distance McEwan looked up and saw a train of cars bearing down on him like winged thunder. Instead of stepping to one side on the frame-work and allowing the train to pass him, he attempted to regain the street. He started to return, and while looking over his shoulder at the approaching train, he missed his footing and fell to the ground, a distance of about twenty feet. The left thigh-bone was severely fractured by the fall. A surgeon was called and the fractured bone set. At present writing we are not informed of the condition of the injured man.

If you would keep warm buy yourself a big Overcoat, Gloves, and last but not least, good Underclothing, all of which KOHN, opposite the National Bank, keeps in large quantities. You can be suited without a doubt. In addition to the above he has a fine assortment of Dress Suits, Furnishing Goods. The prices are down—like the thermometer is just now. Don't wait until the winter is over and be in misery, but buy now while the prices are down.

The Daily Oregonian.
MONDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 1, 1875.

[illegible] CITY.

[illegible]—Mr. Geo. W. Weidler, after 15 [illegible] down the river, returned home [illegible]. During most of the time he has [illegible] Astoria endeavoring to effect arrangements for bringing up the freight and express [illegible] left there. Mr. Weidler left Portland [on] the 17th ult. He started overland for Vancouver, crossing the Columbia at that point on the ice. He then traveled down the ship channel on the ice, to Eagle Cliff, W. T., arriving there Monday, January 18th. A snowstorm prevented further traveling until the [illegible] when Mr. Weidler left Eagle Cliff, reaching Cathlamet that night. The snow was from [illegible] to ten inches in depth on the Territory side of the river, and appeared to be much more than that on the Oregon side viewing the hills surrounding Westport. On the 23d the party was interrupted by several mishaps, chief among which was a shipwreck, as they [illegible] (or by walking on the ice when they could not) navigate, dragging the boat after them. In a leaking condition they sailed, during the night, to [illegible] land just above Cementville, but not having any definite bearings could not tell where they were, and after making repairs started out again for Astoria, pulling some four hours, when daylight revealed to his delighted vision Astoria. [illegible] that place on Sunday—just seven days from Portland. Mr. Weidler returned [illegible], coming on the ice most of the [illegible], from thence to Vancouver, [illegible] to this place. He had a long, [illegible] and [illegible] trip of it, and, as may well be [illegible], is overjoyed in finding himself [illegible] at home.

OVERLAND FROM ASTORIA.—Mr. T. P. Spitz and Mr. F. A. Frank, both of San Francisco, who came as far as Astoria as passengers on the Ajax on her last voyage, arrived in this city last night, having come over the military trail. They brought horses along, but the depth of snow, which averages about three feet, and the mountainous character of the road, made it impossible for them to keep their saddles most of the time. They agree that the journey is about as difficult and fatiguing as any journey of the same length could possibly be. The party left Astoria last Thursday, at noon, in company with the mail carrier, and made the trip to the Gale's creek [illegible] Saturday night. On Sunday morning, giving up their saddle horses, they were conveyed in a sleigh to Forest Grove, where they arrived in [illegible] for the stage to this city. They report the prospect of navigation of the lower Columbia not much improved. The steam launch Katata a few days since went up the river about 25 miles with Geo. Weidler, Esq., but was unable to land. Mr. Weidler made his way to shore on the ice, some of it floating. He would thence proceed by trail to Monticello where he intended taking the cars for the Sound in order, if possible, to intercept the California and prevent her coming into the river till the blockade is raised. Messrs. S. and F. report the patience of the ice-bound passengers still at Astoria as just about worn out.

FURTHER PARTICULARS.—Last week we published an account of a fearful catastrophe occurring in the vicinity of Walla Walla, in which [a] mother and two children were buried under [a] snow slide and perished. Through the [courte]sy of the O. S. N. Co. we have obtained the following additional particulars of the [illegible]. The dispatch bears [date] of Walla Walla, Jan. 30th, and says: [illegible] the [illegible] of the bodies when [found], the [illegible] girl had her neck broken [and] had been carried to the stable by the [illegible] and laid out, with her hands clasped [illegible]. The little boy's back and leg were broken. He had probably not [illegible] when put in the stable, as he [was] found lying on his face beside his sister. [illegible] had her leg and one arm broken, [illegible] received internal [injuries illegible] last week [illegible] her children. Her body was [illegible] the [illegible] when found, and the [illegible] of [illegible] that she had started to go to [a neigh]bor's house and had become exhausted, [illegible] and had died before she [illegible] the place where her children [illegible].

[illegible].—From the R[illegible]d we [take] the following particulars of the [illegible] of J. D. Brown on last [illegible]: Brown was sentenced from [illegible] for larceny, time five years, of which [he] had expired. He filled the position of [illegible], and as it appears, had [illegible] his spare time sawing off the window [illegible] the old ledge on it of filling the [illegible] with soap and soot. After supper each [evening] the convicts have a school hour, and [while] this was going on, Brown very adroitly [illegible] the dummy that connects the [dining] room with the kitchen where he dis[illegible] the bars, made his exit, crossed the chill [waters] of the creek, which were waist deep, [and] made off.

FUNERAL.—The funeral obsequies of the late [Dr.] [illegible] A. Davenport took place yesterday [at] Trinity church, the services being performed by Rev. Mr. Burton. The large church was [densel]y crowded with the friends of the de[ceased], who came to pay the last sad respects to the departed. At the close of the services, the funeral cortege headed for the farm which belonged to Dr. Davenport, a few miles south[west] of the city, where the remains were committed to their last resting place, in obedience to a special request made by the deceased just prior to his death. The funeral was very numerously attended.

DEPOSITIONS.—Says the Salem Record: "T. McKay & Co., the Portland mechanics who put up the new warehouse last summer for [illegible] Mills Co. [illegible] a large amount of extra compar, [illegible] over the contract price, and have brought suit for the recovery of the same, in the circuit court of Multnomah county. That county [illegible] is [usu]ally engaged taking depositions in the case, several days having already been occupied."

[ICE] DOWN.—This morning the O. S. N. [Co.] will dispatch the steamer Annie Stewart [down] the river with the mail. It is not known [whether] the ice has cleared away or not, but it is the intention of the captain of the Stewart [to] [illegible] her through, if possible, to St. Helens. [The steamer] will leave the wharf this morning [at] 6 o'clock.

[COMMISSIONED].—On Saturday Gov. Grover [commiss]ioned the officers of Emmet Guard, [Compan]y B, Second Brigade, Oregon State Militia, as follows: Captain, Jos. R. Wiley; First Lieut., E. D. Browne; Second Lieut., M. [illegible].

One [illegible], "The Rifle Ball," at its second and third renditions, on Saturday [illegible], [illegible] Oro Fino Theater, drew very good houses, and was presented in a manner far more creditable and satisfactory than on the occasion of its first production. It is unnecessary to give any description of the plot of this beautiful drama, as the public are thoroughly familiar with the incidents and situations of the play. A brief mention of the several characters of the drama, and the manner in which each was presented, will suffice. "Eliot Gray," the leading, central character of the play, found a fit representative in Charles A. Ball, Esq. This gentleman's acting throughout was characterized by moderation, naturalness and ease. His personation was in every sense easy and effective, to a degree not to be expected in an amateur. At times the elocution was a little monotonous and faulty, and the gesticulations, not as finished and graceful as could have been desired; but in the main Mr. Ball can be congratulated on having acquitted himself in a manner flattering to his pride, and to the agreeable surprise of the public. In the tableaux scene at the close of the fourth act, when "Eliot Gray" shouts "Up, Lancers!" the acting of Mr. Ball was not inferior to that of a professional who was thoroughly up in the art dramatic. Mr. Charles M. Brown, as "Mathew Leigh," although a little out of his line—villainous characters being his strong suit, in our opinion—played the role quite smoothly and with pleasing effect. O. P. Mason's "Bunberry Kobb" was far better than the public had a right to expect. It was cleverly sustained, and the character invested with much that was ludicrous and laugh-provoking. Col. May, personated by Mr. George C. Sears, was scarcely up to the average standard. The gentleman made quite a "hit" in the "Color Guard" as "Louis Ludlow," the patriot lover; but the character of "Colonel May," the cool, crafty, scheming villain in broadcloth, seemed wholly unsuited to him, and his personation was rather stilted and forced. We attribute this seeming failure, more to [illegible] of, and want of sympathy with the character, than to any deficiency of dramatic ability to properly and satisfactorily represent the part. Comment is unnecessary as to the manner in which Mr. Fulford represented the detestable role of "Miles McKenna." Suffice it to say, he made himself perfectly despicable in the eyes of the audience, which is another mode of saying he did capitally. Little Lucy Mason, as the boy, "Arthur May," was one of the most pleasing features of the drama, and for one so young and inexperienced, sustained the allotted part as creditably as any. Miss Mary L. Pollock, as "Lady Florence," was all that the character required—[illegible], dignified and lady-like. This lady, we understand, cherishes histrionic aspirations, and if favored by circumstances, proposes to adopt the stage as a profession. For a novice, Miss Pollock shows that she is not deficient in the essential elements of an actress' true conception of a character, a good stage presence, with the auxiliaries of a good form, feature, and a round, clear, well-modulated voice. Time, experience and [illegible] is all that the young lady requires. "Rosa Leigh" found a true and fitting representative in Mrs. Fulford, who personated the sweet, lovable and sisterly-like character in a most effective style. R. C. White, as "Tabitha Stork" ("nothing of the sort"), that most termagant and disagreeable of housekeepers, who, after all, had a kind of sympathetic heart, did some very clever acting, and won rounds of applause. Of the remainder and subordinate characters in the cast we can speak in terms of moderate praise, "Lady Adela," by Miss Katie Zimmer; "Sarah," by Mrs. Hulpruner; "Farmer Green," H. Webber; "Romany," H. Earle, and others. The presence of a number of the City Rifles in full dress in the tableaux at the close of the fourth act and at the ball-room scene, contributed greatly to the general effect and appearance of the drama. The most painfully apparent and unpardonable defect of the whole play was want of knowledge of the "lines" by several, rendering it necessary for them to be prompted with unpleasant frequency. With that exception the play was a success.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

County court will convene to-day.

Damp and disagreeable yesterday.

The Albany [illegible] is running again.

The long looked for bark Midas left San Francisco for this port late last week.

The Astoria mail arrived last evening, and will [illegible] boat at 6 o'clock this morning.

Collectors are flitting about as usual to day. Prepare to pay, or trouble them to call again.

Business is improving since the river opened, and everything will be lovely when the Columbia is free again.

Mr. [illegible], who returned from Germany [illegible] weeks ago, is still confined to his [illegible] by sickness.

Mrs. Elizabeth E. Lanbe[illegible], of Stockton, Cal., wants to hear from [illegible], her brother, who was last [heard] from in Oregon [illegible] ago.

Pay your gas bills before the 4th [illegible], and save $1 per thousand. This is an item worth considering these dull times.

Mr. Reed has sold one of his yearling Clydesdale stallions to Mr. A. King, of this city, for $700. He takes him to Goose Lake.

An exchange says: "Ben Holladay has applied for permission to construct wharves and stables on the reservation at Fort Stevens."

East Portlanders wanting the DAILY OREGONIAN can have it delivered promptly by Vallie Brown, our carrier, an energetic little fellow, by leaving orders at the postoffice on that side of the river.

Many teamsters failed to have their horses rough shod, and during the past few days the poor animals thus neglected have frequently slipped down, meeting with accidents in some instances. This oversight should not occur again.

The old man who attempted a few days ago to commit suicide by drowning, made a second attempt by jumping from the railroad ferry pontoon on Saturday. He was fished out, and now languishes in the county jail. He is a pitiable object.

Parties who arrived in this city yesterday from Astoria [illegible] that they met Mr. Scott, a special messenger dispatched by M[illegible] Cor[illegible] with papers, etc. Mr. Scott was in good spirits, and doubtless ere this is down by the "Sounding Sea."

The board of pilot commissioners at the meeting on Tuesday at Astoria, decided to issue no new branches until a full meeting of the board can be had, for the reason that the courts have decided a full board shall be present for such business. Mr. Wadhams was necessarily detained here, the river being closed.

The Astorian makes itself ridiculous about matters connected with the closing of the river by ice, and assumes that Portland will soon "go to rack," because water communication with Astoria is cut off for a few days in the course of ten years. The editor of that paper forgets that many cities containing more people than all Oregon are ice-bound every winter.

LOUIS GRIFFETH, A YOUNG SAILOR, LOSES HIS LIFE BY THE SINKING OF A SKIFF, ON SATURDAY NIGHT—SOME ONE TO BLAME.

Again we are called upon to chronicle the death, by drowning, of a young man named Louis Griffeth, in the Wallamet river, last Saturday night. Substantially, the circumstances of the drowning are as follows.

On Saturday afternoon two men named respectively Flemming and Enner, who reside on a farm down the river in the vicinity of Swan Island, came to the city. These men, it seems, slaughtered a beef on Saturday and brought a portion of the meat to the city for the purpose of selling it, but the animal had been so badly slaughtered that none of the butchers would purchase the meat. However, the men succeeded at length in disposing of the meat to one of the Chinese butchers. Having one quarter of the slaughtered animal to dispose of, the men began to seek for a purchaser. Mr. Katka, who keeps a junk store at the corner of Front and Oak streets, at length bargained for the meat. He had in his employ a young man named Louis Griffeth, and it was understood that Kafka was to send him down with the men to get the beef. Flemming, Enner and Griffeth were to go down to the farm in a skiff, and the latter was to bring the meat back in the same boat. Matters were thus settled and the three persons embarked in a small skiff at the foot of F street, and started down the river. It was about 9 o'clock in the evening when the men left the city. Before starting, Flemming and Enner had been indulging freely in liquor and were much intoxicated. Just previous to their departure, they were observed to enter a saloon and purchase a bottle of whisky. When they entered the skiff, Griffeth and one of the men took a seat near the stern of the boat, while the other person sat in the middle and used the oars. After emerging from the slip the oarsman headed down the river. How the boat came to fill with water, of course can not be known, as the two intoxicated men have separate stories about the matter; but so it happened that by this time the skiff came opposite the schooner Hera it had filled with water. One man says that the boat leaked, and the other declares that the water came in over the stern. Hearing cries for help, the first and second mates of the Hera ran on deck and looking over, discovered through the darkness, several persons struggling in the water. At the time the skiff was capsized. Flemming and Enner, finding themselves in the water, started to swim for the shore, leaving Griffeth to shift for himself. As quickly as possible, a boat was lowered from the Hera and the two mates leaped in and started to the assistance of the imperiled youth. While the boat was being lowered Griffeth continued to cry for help, and was encouraged to hold on by the men, who told him that they would come to him in a few minutes. Suddenly he ceased to speak, a gurgling sound was heard, and the poor fellow sank beneath the dark waters. When the mates reached the place they found the skiff floating keel up, but no trace of poor Griffeth. Meantime, Enner and Flemming had swum to the rear end of the steamer Shoo Fly, and clambering up on the wheel, reached the deck in safety. Even the cold bath and narrow escape was not sufficient to sober these men up. Dry clothes were provided them, and after warming themselves these valiant (?) fellows manifested their disinterestedness and apathy by righting the capsized skiff, and proceeding on their way as if nothing unusual had transpired. As before stated, the men have contradictory versions of how the accident occurred.

Louis Griffeth was aged about twenty years. He was a native of North Wales, where his mother is still residing. Last fall Griffeth came to Portland as a sailor on the bark Hotspur. He is said to have been a steady, industrious young fellow, and well liked. No efforts have been made as yet to recover the body. We are of the opinion that the case ought to be thoroughly investigated, and if it is found that through culpable or criminal negligence the young man lost his life, his companions should be held m[illegible] responsible, and punished accordingly.

The winter is fairly upon us. We must keep warm no matter what the cost. Don't go about like a frozen man, but straighten up and boldly enter the [esta]blishment of BECK & WALDMAN, and ask them to show you their heavy winter goods. They'll do it, and what's more will not astonish you with big prices because of the cold weather. On the contrary, they [illegible] to make their patrons happy by clothing them well, and at the same time charging a low price to suit the present times. Don't wait until it is too late, but go now.

Cause of Nervousness.

The maladies which above all others cause nervousness, are dyspepsia, billiousness and constipation. The great sympathetic nerve which connects the epigastric region with the brain, is always injuriously affected if the stomach and bowels are disordered; a permanent derangement of the functions of those organs reacts by sympathy upon the entire nervous system. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters in restoring tone and regularity to the digestive apparatus, and overcoming constipation, permanently remedy the nervous complaints which originate in all-overy weakness or disturbances. They are the very best nervine that can be used. By eradicating the exciting causes of nervous weakness, they permanently overcome the disability itself. But this is not all. By checking the maladies which cause nervousness, they build up anew the system weakened and depleted by nervous disease.

Healthful Stimulation.

Diffusable stimulants, provided they be absolutely pure, are among the most useful medicinal agents employed by physicians. When the tone of the system is lowered by the depressing influences of disease, or there is an inherent want of vigor in the constitution, they serve to counteract weakening tendencies and cheer the mind of the desponding invalid. But when, as in the case of Hostetter's Bitters, they possess tonic and alterative properties, their effects are rendered permanent, and they accomplish a truly beneficial result. The Bitters not only relieve nervous debility and mental depression by their healthfully stimulative action, but infuse abiding vigor into the depleted system, and rectify those internal disturbances which are the real causes of weakness. The purity and the wholesomeness of the alcoholic basis of the Bitters greatly increases the efficacy of their botanic ingredients, a fact which the completeness of their curative effects sufficiently demonstrates.

A man named Dempsey got whipped twice a few days ago all within the space of 20 minutes. He was the aggressor in both instances. In addition to the licking he had to pay about $40 on two charges, of assault and battery.

A gentleman, while driving along J street on Friday in his buggy, had a narrow escape. The animal slipped and fell. One of the shafts was splintered, and several straps gave way. Fortunately the driver was not thrown out.

A few days since Dr. C. H. Raffety removed a large tumor from the muscles of a Mr. Otis' left arm. The operation was a rather painful one, and it was deemed necessary to place the patient under the influence of chloroform. The tumor was nearly as large as one's fist, and for a long time had been a source of painful annoyance to Mr. Otis. The operation was performed in a skillful manner, and the patient is doing well.

A gentleman named McEwen, who resides in Stephens' Addition, met with a painful accident on Saturday afternoon. He started to walk toward his home on the trestle-work south of L street. After walking a short distance McEwan looked up and saw a train of cars bearing down on him like winged thunder. Instead of stepping to one side on the frame-work and allowing the train to pass him, he attempted to regain the street. He started to return, and while looking over his shoulder at the approaching train, he missed his footing and fell to the ground, a distance of about twenty feet. The left thigh-bone was severely fractured by the fall. A surgeon was called and the fractured bone set. At present writing we are not informed of the condition of the injured man.

SECRET AFFINITIES

A PANTHEISTIC FANTASY FROM THE FRENCH OF THEOPHILE GAUTIER

[In the last [illegible] Francis Doyle renders from the French of Th[illegible] a poem entitled "Secret Affinities, a Pantheistic Fantasy," which we trust the reader will admire as much as we do.]

Deep in the vanished time, two statues white,
On an old temple front against blue gloom
Of an Athenian sky [illegible] with light
Blended their marble beams

In the same shell [illegible] crystal tears
Of the sad sea mourning her Venus [illegible]
Two pearls of [illegible] through long years
Kept whispering words unknown

In the fresh pleasance by Granada's river
Close to the low voiced fountain's silver showers,
Two roses from Boabdil's garden ever
Mingled their murmuring flowers

Upon the domes of Venice in a nest
Where love from age to age has had his day
Two white doves with their feet of pink found rest
Through the soft month of May

Dove rose pearl marble into ruin [illegible]
Alike dissolve themselves alike decay
Pearls melt, flowers wither marble shapes dis[illegible]
And bright birds float away

Each [illegible] at once free flies back to feed
The unfathomable [illegible] yearning dumb,
Whence God's all [illegible] hands in silence knead
Each form that is to come

By slow, slow change to white and tender flesh
The [illegible] grain
The rose in lips as sweet and red and fresh
Refigured blooms again

The [illegible] once more murmur and coo beneath
The [illegible] of two young lovers when they met
The pearls renew themselves and flash as teeth
Through smiles divinely sweet

Hence sympathetic emanations flow
And with soft tyranny the heart control,
[illegible] kindred spirits learn to know
Their sisterhood of soul

Obedient to the hint some fragrance sends
Some color or some ray with mystic power
Atom to atom never swerving tends,
As the bee seeks her power

Of moonlit visions round the temple shed
Or lives linked in [illegible] memory wakes
Of [illegible] flashing through the petals red
Where the bright fountain breaks

[illegible] that shivered to the [illegible]
On golden domes after [illegible] back to faith
[illegible] faithful to remembered [illegible]
The old love stirs again

Forgotten presences shine forth, the past
Is for the [illegible]
The breathing flower in crimson lips recast,
Lives to [illegible] revealed

Where the laugh plays a glittering [illegible] within
The pearl reclaims her lustre softly bright
The [illegible] in a maiden skin
As fresh and pure and white

[illegible] voice the dove
Has found an echo of her tender moan
Resistance grows impossible and love
Springs up from the unknown

Oh! [illegible]
What shrine, what [illegible], what dove, what rose-tree bower
Saw us commingling marble joined of yore
As pearl or bird or flower?

1775 LEXINGTON—1875

PROPOSED CELEBRATION OF THE CENTENNIAL OF THE BATTLE

The residents of the town of Lexington Mass, have determined to celebrate with ceremonies befitting the occasion the one hundredth anniversary of the Battle of Lexington, [illegible] Charles Hudson, M B Merriam and W H [illegible], who have been appointed a Committee on Invitations, have issued a circular, in which they make the following statement: "The Revolution, which made us an independent nation, is worthy of the very highest consideration and no local [illegible] appropriate for commemoration [illegible] than the very [illegible] where the first blood was shed, [illegible] resistance in arms was offered to British aggression. It is proposed [illegible] for the celebration of the [illegible] of the broad historic int[illegible] pertains to the event. The [illegible] of the country generally are invited to join in the observances. The pro[illegible] of the day [illegible] unveiling of the [illegible] and [illegible] refuge from [illegible] in Lexington, and [illegible] that day—and [illegible]. It is expected that the [illegible] will be honored by the presence of the Executive of the United States, representatives of the different departments of the National and State Governments, literary and other organizations, and distinguished individuals of the Republic, whose words of eloquence and wisdom will add interest to the occasion."

[illegible]—"One o' them fellers," remarked Bijah, as he named out Tom Livingston, a young man charged with vag[illegible]

"So you [illegible] ain't anything to do, eh?" asked the Court.

"Nothing," mournfully answered the [illegible]

"Out of work, no home and your cash so short that you couldn't get into a woman's rights convention, eh?" con[illegible] His Honor.

"You've struck it, pardner," answered the prisoner with a smile.

"Yes, and now I'll strike you Mr Livingston. I'm down on loafers and vags, and I'm going to bind you for sixty if it tears the desk down. You'll have something to do up there besides sitting on a box [illegible] whistling 'Come, Love, Come.' And when the day fades into night, and the remainder of the world retires to rest, you'll have a bed and some covering. [illegible] some one to hoe that dirt off of you, cut your hair, dig out your nails, and when you come out you will be so disguised that your own mother will think you [illegible] English duke out here to hunt ducks and buy gun stock."

The prisoner said he was willing to go [illegible] of the invitation pleased him as well as he thought it would he might come back for a longer sentence.—Detroit Free Press

THE NEW DANISH POLAR EXPEDITION.—This expedition, which will consist of two steam whale ships and about 120 men and officers, will leave this country next summer, and proceed through Davis Strait up Baffin's Bay to the Danish settlements of Disco and Upernavik. These will be its base. Then, still heading northward the volunteers will enter Smith's Sound and one will be left as an intermediate depot in 81 degrees north latitude, in a fixed position while the second will press on into the open sea which it is believed exists about the Pole. The depot-ship will be about 540 miles from the Pole, and the retreat upon it, in case of disaster, will not be difficult to men with sledges. The expedition will have orders in any case to return in the autumn of 1877, and a steamer will probably be sent to the depot-ship in the summer of 1876 to bring back [illegible] of the condition of the expedition and the details of such information as may have been obtained. The report that Commander Markham has been selected to command the expedition is premature. The Admiralty are divided between the appointment of a young comparatively inexperienced officer and a senior officer of experience but with weight of years. The cost of the expedition is estimated at $30 000 a year.—London paper

FIVE ACES.—Jack and Jim Reynolds, cousins and loafers, were playing poker in a bar room near Augusta Me. Jack held a straight with an ace at the head and to his intense delight, Jim put down the money as fast as he raised until the pool amounted to over $10. Then Jim called and Jack threw down his straight. Then Jim threw down four aces. This indicated the miracle of five aces in one pack or a fraud and Jack expressed his opinion that there was a shenanigan going on. He crumbled Jim's aces, and found that one of them was a tray with the end spots chalked out. A fight ensued for the stakes in which Jim was stabbed and Jack had his nose bitten but neither got the money because somebody to[illegible] while they were fighting.

Average California white ex-warehouse [illegible] quoted by latest telegrams from Liverpool at [illegible] per quarter. Oregon ditto 46s 8d. Oregon cargoes for prompt shipment are quotable in Liverpool at 48s per quarter ditto in Cork 44s. The European markets are all reported dull and cargoes [illegible] find slow sale.

There has seldom been a [illegible] in the history of Portland during the last decade which presented less subject matter for comment [illegible] the way of commercial affairs than has the past week and the month now closing. To-day we find no change in the aspect of affairs business at the same standstill as before quietly awaiting the opening of navigation to the sea.

Monetary matters are reported to show a little more scarcity than was anticipated but as collection day usually brings out the complaints on this [illegible], we are not led to believe that any [illegible] scarcity for the purposes of legitimate trade exists and it is probable that the resumption of business is all that is necessary to remove the apparent deficiency in the circulating capital of the community. During the cold weather many mills manufacturing establishments and other enterprises have shut down or suspended and disbursements have been very limited causing an apparent scarcity, when the difficulty is not so much a lack of money as the inactivity of the forces which give it circulation. The return of business to its accustomed channels will quickly remedy this evil. Such a return is expected in another week.

In the line of trade there is a fair amount of activity in the filling of orders from points up the valley with which direction only we have transportation facilities at present. These orders are not large but numerous enough to make quite a reduction in the stocks of some of our dealers while prevented from filling up by the ice in the Columbia. Prices manifest but little disposition to fluctuate.

Produce is coming forward by steamers quite rapidly and our warehouses are filling up with grain and flour there being now in this city the estimated amount of 7,000 tons of wheat and flour awaiting shipment.

Advices from abroad note but little change in prices for wheat though the tendency of the San Francisco market seems to be downward. Ours is unchanged.

There has seldom been a week or month in the history of ... the last decade which presented less subject matter for comment in the way of commercial affairs than has the past week and the month now closing. To-day we find no change in the aspect of affairs business at the same standstill as before quietly awaiting the opening of navigation to the sea.

Monetary matters are reported to show a little more scarcity than was anticipated but as collection day usually brings out the complaints on this score we are not led to believe that an actual scarcity for the purposes of legitimate trade exists and it is probable that the ... revival of business is all that is necessary to remove the apparent deficiency in the circulating capital of the community. During the cold weather many mills, manufacturing establishments and other enterprises have shut down or suspended and disbursements have been very limited causing an apparent scarcity when the difficulty is not so much a lack of money as the ... activity of the forces which give it circulation. The return of business to its accustomed channels will quickly remedy this evil. Such a return is expected in another week

In the line of trade there is a fair amount of activity in the filling of ... points up the valley with which direction only we have transportation facilities at present. These orders are not large but numerous enough to make quite a re ... in the stocks of ... of our dealers while ... from filling up by the ice in the Columbia. Prices manifest but little disposition to fluctuate.

Produce is coming forward by steamers quite rapidly and our warehouses are filling up with grain and flour there being now in this city the estimated amount of 7 000 tons of wheat and flour awaiting shipment.

Advices from abroad note but little change in prices for wheat though the tendency of the San Francisco market seems to be downward. Ours is unchanged.
